

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A contents distribution station includes a channel allocation unit, which judges whether the number of contents reception stations receiving a certain contents is large or small. When the number is large, a broadcast channel is allocated to a reception station requesting distribution of contents. When the number is small, an occupied channel is allocated to the reception station requesting distribution of contents.